I think that Eve should take a job as a cryptanalyst at the NSA (as almost everyone else has said). This would give her access to all of the powerful computers that she needs in order to break Bob and Alice's encryption scheme. In order to get the information, she should first go to the FISA courts for a warrant. This seems a lot more ethical to me than investigating without a warrant. People should be able to retain their privacy, but the government should also be able to investigate if they have enough evidence. I think that the government has too much power in these areas, but "Eve" should go about it right and get a warrant. If "Eve" does all of this, she should be able to catch the bad guys, ethically and legally.
